The stripes are made with a cold-processed frosted finish, creating a textured dialogue between matte and glossy surfaces on the transparent surface. When unlit, they refract ambient light like crystal piano keys. Once lit, the candlelight passes through the stripes and casts a grid of interlaced light and shadow on the wall, turning every moment into a dynamic light and shadow musical score.

A three-dimensional light and shadow show is presented through the refraction of light and shadow. The transparent glass collides with the striped texture, serving not only as a container for candles but also as a visual carrier of the brand's philosophy.

This glass candle jar , when used as a DIY container, features a transparent base that allows dried flowers, shells and other decorative materials to be presented in three dimensions.
